Postdoctoral Fellow in Black Feminism

The Duke University Program in Women's Studies invites applications for a residential postdoctoral fellow in Black Feminism for the 2016-2017 year. Through research, teaching, and service, the fellow will contribute to the overall work of the Program. We seek candidates with interdisciplinary experience in Women's Studies and a strong record in teaching and scholarship in the area of Black Feminism. We welcome empirical, textual, and theoretical specialization from a diverse array of academic fields, conceptual frames, and topical contexts. We are particularly interested in teaching that connects to our undergraduate program and particularly that strengthens our ties with global health, race and ethnicity, and/or visual culture. Postdoctoral fellows are expected to teach one class for the program and to participate in and facilitate a variety of activities across the fellowship year (e.g., coordinating lectures, reading groups, engaging in outreach). The fellowship includes a stipend, health insurance, and office space. Applicants should have PhD in hand by July 1, 2016 and be no more than five years past the PhD. In addition to your letter of application, please include a C.V., writing sample (20-25 pages), 1-page course proposal (undergraduate), and 3 letters of recommendation. Please submit application electronically by January 31, 2016 through AcademicJobsOnline.org, job 6685. Our program information is available at http://womenstudies.duke.edu/.

Duke University is an Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer committed to providing employment opportunity without regard to an individual’s age, color, disability, genetic information, gender, gender identity, national origin, race, religion, sexual orientation, or veteran status.